

ME INVITES

If I was a film critic for a day...Contemplates nine-year-old Keshav Rai

Today, senior journalists and experts are film critics. They are too tall for 'shorts', consider themselves a bit much genius for Aladdin's genie, a little too witty to outwit Shin-Chan and a wee bit frail to feel the power of Bal Hanuman.

I maybe barely five feet tall, yet my father thinks I am a film buff. Now if only I would get a chance to be a film critic. I will spy with my little eye (pun not intended). According to me, a film is like a rollercoaster ride. At first, there are many 'ifs and buts' about it. But when you get on with it, it is such a big thrill.

Adults may not relate with films for kids. But for little dudes like us it's 'dil-logical'. If I saw comical characters in a tremendously hilarious role, I would tell other kids to laugh themselves silly.

So my young comrades, don't go by an elder's review. Just go and grab a huge bucket of popcorn and enjoy the show!
